ABSTRACT

NIRWANA NENGSI, 2021, “Designing ESP Syllabus for Arabic Education Study Program at IAIN Palopo.” Thesis English Study Program Educational Department in the State Islamic Studies Palopo, Supervised by Dr. Sahraini, M. Hum. and Dewi Furwana, S.Pd. I., M.Pd

This research attempted to designing an ESP syllabus for Arabic Education Study Program at IAIN Palopo. The research question was “what kind of Syllabus design is appropriate for the Arabic education study program at IAIN Palopo.” The research method is Research and Development method (R&D), which utilized the Addie model. Addie’s model consists of 5 development steps, namely (1) analysis, (2) design, (3) development, (4) implementation, and (5) evaluation. This research used the instruments for need analysis, student’s perception, and observation sheet for three expert validators. The population of this research was the third-semester students of Arabic. The designed ESP syllabus for the second semester of Arabic Education students at IAIN Palopo includes several components: (1) Learning goal is to communicate both oral and written using English for Arabic students and Arabic education teacher; (2) Learning material: English Material is basic English and vocabulary including part of speech, auxiliary verb (to be, to do, to have, and modals), question word, active and passive voice, asking and giving advice, showing prohibition, and asking and giving an opinion. The Arabic material including manners, praiseworthy traits, the five pillars of Islam, the inspirational Islamic figure, ulul azm prophet, halal and haram, the six pillars of faith, virtues of religion, and tolerance in religion. (3) Syllabus types are the skill-based syllabus and content-based syllabus; (4) Learning media are video, picture, book, and social media. This research's product is appropriate to be applied to the second-semester students of the Arabic study program.

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background

A syllabus is a curriculum development that describes the necessary competency and essential competencies to be achieved, the main points, and descriptions of material that students need to learn. The syllabus as curriculum development and learning in its implementation by educators is elaborated in the plan and execution of keeping learning to the assessment to learning outcomes. Educators review and develop syllabus on an ongoing basis by considering the evaluation results through reflection and classroom action research and evaluating learning outcomes through tests with correct procedures and standards.

Syllabus design for an ESP program is essential because it is a form of assessment, need, and function for which English is required. As we know that ESP may improve student's English skill-based their study program at college. The importance of having a syllabus for teaching they are: 1) to make the material manageable. Language is complex. We can not learn just in one way; we must have some way to learn it. 2) to give support to the teachers and learners. Besides practice, the benefit syllabus can allow teachers and learners to make learning tasks easy to understand. 3) to make the syllabus can be seen as a way to get the learning.¹

¹ Parkes, J., & Harris, M. B. (2002). The purposes of a syllabus. College Teaching, 50(2), 55-61.

In IAIN PALOPO, based on the researcher's observation on 20 August 2019 in the Arabic education study program, there are three problems based on the researcher's observation before. First, there is no guidance in teaching and learning English. It may affect the students and lecturers, such as in the learning process, no goal could be reached because there is no guidance (syllabus). Second, the material is in general. Third, the students want to learn specific English material based on their study program. Meanwhile, the one way to solve those problems is looking for an appropriate syllabus in the teaching and learning process. Why syllabus? It is because the syllabus is the first essential thing in making material. There was narrated by Prophet Muhammad SAW giving a message to Mu'adz bin Jabal r.a. when sending him to the land of Yaman.

لَأَنْ يَهْدِيَ اللَّهُ بِكَ رَجُلًا وَاجِدًا خَيْرٌ لَكَ مِنَ الدُّنْيَا وَمَا فِيهَا

"And if because of your teaching, Allah SWT gives a hint to someone. Then, for you, it is better than the world and its contents".

Based on the illustration above, the researcher is interested in designing an English syllabus for the Arabic education study program. Therefore, this research title is "Designing ESP Syllabus for Arabic Education Study Program at IAIN Palopo."

B. Formulation of The Problem

Based on the problem above, the researcher formulated the research question as follows "What kind of syllabus design appropriate for the Arabic education study program at IAIN Palopo?."

C. The Objective of The Research

This research aimed to design an ESP syllabus for the second-semester students of the Arabic education study program using the ADDIE model.

D. The Significant of The Research

The result of this research was hoped useful as follow:

1. Student

It was expected to use for the learners to improve their English according to their needs.

2. Lecture

It was expected to be useful for English lecturer to teach in the classroom as the references in teaching English to better the quality of teaching and learning.

3. The next researcher

It was expected to be useful for the next researchers as one of the research for further research.

E. Specification of The Research

The researcher will design the ESP syllabus for the Arabic Education study Program at IAIN Palopo. A syllabus is a learning plan in the subject that includes CPMK (significant achievement), indicator, criteria, the form of judgment, learning method, learning material, quality of assessment. This syllabus consists of 14 meetings, including the middle test in the eighth meeting and the final examination in the fourteenth meeting

F. Assumption and Limitation of The Research

1. Development Assumption

It was assumed that this research would ESP syllabus for the Arabic education study program at IAIN Palopo. This assumption is based on the reason that Arabic education still learns about general English.

2. Development Limitation

The syllabus only contains ESP material. This syllabus only for the Arabic education study program, especially for the second semester at IAIN Palopo.

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

A. Previous Studies

In writing this research, the researcher finds out several studies that aimed to develop instructional materials. They are:

1. Wieka Barathayomi & Dina Rachmawati (2016) with the title "Designing English for Specific Purpose Syllabus for Editing Course." This study discusses the editing course syllabus designed based on prerequisites knowledge and skill of an editor.² This study has the same purpose as that study above; it is Designing ESP syllabus while the differences are the study above for editing course.
2. Miftahul Khair Nur Ali Mubar (2017) with the title "Developing English Learning materials for Young Learners Based on Need Analysis at MTsN Model Makassar." This study discusses developing learning materials especially for speaking at the third-grade students of MTsN Model Makassar. The final needs analysis showed that the MTsN Model Makassar students want to learn English, especially speaking. Finally, the English learning material for the students named speaking material consists of six topics and 18 activities to improve students speaking skill and presented in 24 pages is the result of this study.³ This study has the same purpose as that study above. It is developing English materials using English Specific purpose: The analysis above advanced English materials for ninth grade.

3. Luqman Hakim (2017), with the title "Developing Esp Syllabus for Nursing Students At Stikes Al-Irsyad Cilacap, " This study discusses developing learning material, especially on speaking and listening to stikes Al- instead of Cilacap. The result of the needs analysis showed that stikes students of Cilacap want English materials especially speaking and listening.⁴

This study has the same purpose as that study above. It is developing English materials using English Specific goals. Simultaneously, the differences are the study above advanced English materials for stikes student and only focused on speaking and listening materials. In contrast, this study will develop English learning material for Arabic Education Program and empowering four integrated skills.

B. Literature Review

1. English for Specific Purposes (ESP)
 - a. Definition of ESP

Hutchinson and Waters define that Esp as an approach to teaching language

³ Nur Ali Mubar, Miftahul Khair.(2017) “Developing English Learning materials for Young Learners Based on Need Analysis at MTsN Model Makassar”

⁴ Hakim. Luqman (2017) “Developing Esp Syllabus for Nursing Students At Stikes Al-Irsyad Cilacap“(Dipenogoro University).

where all decisions as method and content are based on learner's reason in learning English. According to Gatehouse (2001), ESP is oriented with the learning and learners, a conception and preference for communicative competence. It is found to meet what the learners need. Richards & Rodger (2001, p.107) saw ESP as an approach that serves the student's needs.⁵

b. Categorization of ESP

Esp has traditionally been divided into three classified main branches, They are:⁶

Table 1: Areas of ESP teaching (Basturkmen, 2010:6)

| Branches | Sub Branches | Example |
|-------------------------------------|---|------------------------------|
| English for Academic Purposes (EAP) | English for General Academic Purpose (EGAP) | English for Academic Writing |
| | English for Specific Academic Purposes (ESAP) | English for Banking Studies |

|---|---|----------------------------------|
| English for Professional Purposes (EPP) | English for General Professional Purposes (EGPP) | |
| | English for Specific Professional Purposes (ESPP) | English for Doctor |
| English for Occupational Purposes (EOP) | English For General Occupational Purposes (EGOP) | English for Hospitality Industry |
| | English for Specific Occupational Purposes (ESOP) | English for Hotel Receptionist |

The table shows that the English for academic purposes includes English for general educational purposes and English for Specific Academic Purposes. Simultaneously, English for Professional Purposes has English for General Professional Purposes and English for Specific Professional Purposes. However, English for Occupational Purposes includes English for General Occupational Purposes and English for Specific Occupational Purposes.

c. Characteristic of ESP

According to Strevens (1998), ESP is needed to distinguish between two variable characteristics and four fundamental characteristics: the varying factors include (1) make the line as language skill to learn, for example, only speaking. (2) it is not illegal according to ordinary pre methodology. The four fundamental characteristics of ESP include (1) designed to find specific needs of the students. (2) based on the content. (3) The language's main point is appropriate to the activities in lexis, syntax, discourse semantic, and analysis. (4) make a difference with general English.

Dudley-Evans (1998) said that there are two kinds of characteristics that outline ESP: variable characteristics and fundamental characteristics. Variable characteristic includes (1) ESP must be related to or designed to specific disciplines. (2) ESP is used in the particular situation of teaching, a different methodology with general English. (3) ESP is designed for adult students, but it is based on the work situation. (4) ESP is designed for intermediate or advanced learners. (5) ESP assumes some basic knowledge of the system of language.

2. Needs Analysis in ESP

According to Hutchinson and Waters (1987), there are two categories of needs analysis, namely: Target need and learning need (Nation and Macalister, 2010:24)⁷

a. Target needs analysis

Target needs deal with what the students have to do in the target situation, formulated by Hutchinson and Waters (1987). Target needs include three useful parts: (1) Necessities are the type of demand known as a must by the target situation. It means what the learners must learn is how they function virtually in the target situation. (2) Lacks are discrepancies between target proficiency and learner proficiency. Lacks can be organized only after the teachers or designers have known the needs of students. (3) Want concern with the realizing of requirements that specify the situation of ESP.

b. Learning need analysis

Learning needs refer to what the learner needs to do to teach (Nation & Macalister, 2010: 24). The learning need is based on the activities that the students need to do to achieve the students' abilities to perform the degree of competencies in the target's situation. To construct the materials, it is essential to analyze the students' need to learn to decide an engaging learning and teaching process that the students wish. This analysis is connected with setting, activities, teachers' role and the rule of students. The other four task components are applied to this research to meet a good composition of the learning task.

3. Definition of Syllabus

According to Salim (1987:98), the syllabus explains that a syllabus is an outline, summary, abstract, or the main point of the content or learning material. Yulaelawati (2004:123) defines syllabus as a group planning and implementation in arrangements for assessment and learning made for systems that contain all components having a relationship with the aim of mastering essential competencies. According to Hutchinson and Waters (2002), a syllabus a statement of what has to learn. According to Hutchinson & waters (1987:80), the syllabus is an opinion of the nature of language and learning. Besides, the syllabus is compiled based on standard content, which contains subject identity, competency standards, basic Competencies, learning activities, assessment, indicators, and learning resources. Breen (1989:47) said that the syllabus is a plan of what has to be achieved through the teaching and learning process.⁸

4. Types of Syllabus

According to Railley (1988), there are six types of the syllabus; they are:

1) A structural (formal) syllabus

Language teaching is a collection of the forms and structures, usually grammatical, of the language being taught.

⁸ Rahman, M. (2015). English for Specific Purposes (ESP): A Holistic Review. Universal Journal of Educational Research, 3(1), 24-31.

2) A notional/functional syllabus

The language teaching content is a collection of the functions performed when language is used or the notions that language was used to express.

3) A situational syllabus.

Language teaching is a collection of real or imaginary situations in which language occurs or is used. A condition usually involves several participants who are engaged in some activity in a specific setting. The language appearing in the situation consists of several functions, combined into a plausible segment of discourse. The primary purpose of a situational language teaching syllabus is to teach the language in cases.

4) A skill-based syllabus.

The language teaching content is a collection of specific abilities that may play a part in using language. Skills are things that people must be able to do to be competent in a language, relatively independently of the situation or setting in which the language use can occur. At the same time, situational syllabi group functions together into specific settings of language use, skill-based syllabi group linguistic competencies (pronunciation, vocabulary, grammar, and discourse) together into generalized types of behavior, such as listening to spoken language for the main idea, writing well-formed paragraphs, giving effective oral presentations, and so on. The primary purpose of skill-based instruction is to learn the specific language skill. A possible secondary goal is to develop more general competence in the language, learning only incidentally any information that may be available while applying the language skills.

5) A task-based syllabus.

The teaching content is a series of complex and purposeful tasks that the students want or need to perform with their language. The lessons are defined as activities with a purpose other than language learning, but, as in a content-based syllabus, the tasks' performance is approached in a way that is intended to develop second language ability. Language learning is subordinate to task. Performance and language teaching occurs only as the need arises during the performance of a given task. Tasks integrate language (and other) skills in specific settings of language use. Task-based teaching differs from situation-based teaching. While situational teaching aims to teach the particular language in the situation (a predefined product), task-based education aims to introduce students to draw on resources to complete some work (a process). The students draw on various language forms, functions, and skills, often in an individual and unpredictable way, in completing the tasks. Tasks that can be used for language learning are, generally, tasks that the learners have to perform in any case.

6) A content-based-syllabus.

The primary purpose of instruction is to teach some content or information using the language that the students are also learning. The students are simultaneously language students and students of whatever content is being taught.

The subject matter is primary, and language learning occurs incidentally to content learning. The content teaching does not organize around language teaching, but vice-versa. Content-based language teaching is concerned with information, while task-based language teaching is concerned with communicative and cognitive processes.

5. Syllabus Design

There are many theories about syllabus design. According to Jordan (1997:20), to design a syllabus in a course, we need to analyze and establish the objectives. The next steps are selecting material, grading, choosing the language content, and dividing the content into units. Richard (2001:2) said that designing a syllabus is selecting the content based on what the students' needs.⁹

There are several stages the designer or the specialists in the field of designing syllabus have to follow. These stages break the process of syllabus design into components. Most researchers such as Graves,1996, Sysoyev 2000, and Chen 2007, agree on the same steps in designing any syllabus. The stages are:

a. Need Analysis

According to Nunan (1988), the term needs analysis as "sets of tools, techniques, and procedures for determining the language content and learning process for a specified group of learners." Ellis 2003 states that need analysis is "a procedure for establishing the specific needs of language learners. These needs include the situations in which the language will be used and the communicative purposes it will be put to"

⁹ Sanal, Fahriddin. Syllabus Design. Vol.2, Issue.3, 2016, pp 190-192

b. Instrument of collect need analysis

There are different ways to find information about students' need and experiences before. Many questionnaires, research may do it, group discussions, and interviews. According to sysoyev 2002, In syllabus design, student analysis will help teachers bring together the requirement of the students in formulating goals and objectives.

c. Determination of goals and objectives

According to Grave 1996:17, a goal what we must achieve in learning language, goals are a statement of the purposes of a syllabus. While objectives are the systematic of what have to be achieved in a syllabus. A description of specific objectives in terms which can be observed and measure is known as a behavioral objectives.

d. Content conceptualization

To make a concept of content is not easy, or it is not free context process. When account the information about the students, goals, and objectives. Teacher have to determine what aspects of learning will be included and used to address student's needs and expectations. According to Sysoyev 2003:3, syllabus designer may focuses on developing the basic skill, competence of communicative, awareness of vocabulary, etc.

e. Selection and development of material and activities

They are selecting and developing means that create a new material. When the teachers or designer create a material, it should be considered as the language used, the method to be used, etc.

f. Organization of contents and activities

Organization of contents and activities is also considered an issue because it reflects the syllabus's philosophy, whether it is structural, tasks, or communicative.

g. Evaluation

Teachers have to evaluate their syllabus to promote and improve their quality. Evaluation can be done in two ways: (1) Implicitly evaluation is the evaluation that has to do during the semester. The learners' grades, participation, and motivation have to give the teacher the learning. (2) The detailed evaluation has to do at the end of the syllabus or after learning it.¹⁰

6. English-Arabic

a. Arabic Departement

Arabic education is one of the majors which the university provides. It is also a study program that many students are interested in and chose, especially female students, for being a job. Besides the Arabic study program, it is easy to find a job, and students who have a skill about it can be a master in Arabic.

¹⁰ Basturkmen, Helen. 2010. Developing Courses in English for Specific Purposes. New York: Palgrave Macmillan

At this moment, English is known as an essential language in communication in all aspects, including in the education aspect. English in Arabic is very needed for the students to achieve their competence. It may help the students of Arabic to competent in the future.

b. English in Arabic

English is a critical subject lesson in the Arabic study program because it teaches English from the first semester until the second semester. Besides, the students learn about general English.

According to the Arabic education study program's goal in learning English, The learning English material should appropriate its skill. One basic approach to developing English material is ESP (English for Specific Purposes).

7. Instructional Design Model

In the literature, there are models of instructional design that are often implemented in research. Borg & Gall, Dick & Carrey, Hannafin and Peck, and 4-D design models.¹¹

a. Borg and Gall

Borg & Gall (1987: 775) develop a procedure containing ten steps in developing learning materials. They are (1) Information and research selection. (2) Planning. (3) Develop form of the product. (4) First field testing.(5) Revision product. (6) Second field testing. (7) Revision product. (8) Third field testing. (9) Last revision product. (10) Dissemination and implementation.

b. Dick and Carrey

Another Research and Development model is proposed by Dick & Carey (2001: 240). The steps are (1) identify the instructional goal, (2) writing performance objective, (3) developing assessment instrument, (4) developing the excellent strategy, (5) developing and selecting a suitable material, (6) designing and conducting formative evaluation, (7) revising, (8) working and designing a formative assessment, (9) designing and executing the summative assessment.

c. 4D Model

This model has four phases such as: (1) Defining. (2) Designing. (3) Developing. (4) Disseminating by Thiagarajan, dkk (1974). In defining stage, there will be conducting learner's need analysis. The next phase is designing a product produced and developed based on the learner's needs analysis. The next step will be developing the product with good validities from the expert judgments, lecturer, and the learners as the users. The last phase is disseminating the product published through the seminar, social media, journal, etc.

d. Addie Model

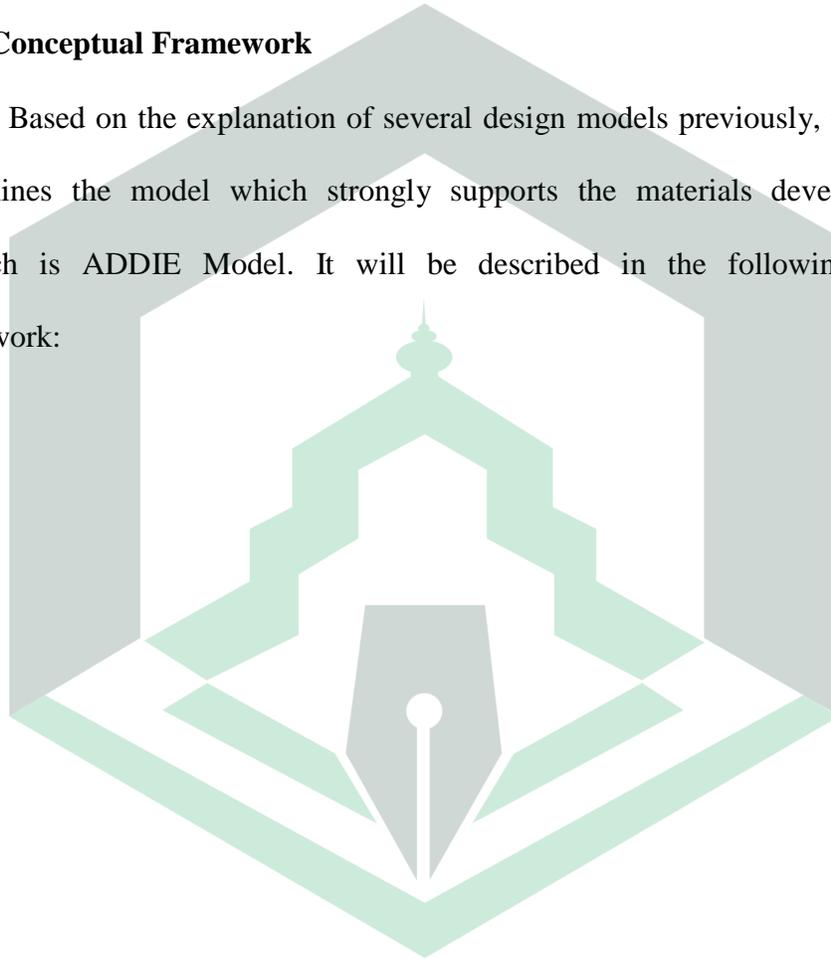

According to Raiser & Mollenda (1990), this model stands for five words.

- (1) Analysis: The analysis phase explains the instructional complication and point, classifies the learning environment and learners' current familiarity and abilities. In the analysis part, there are questions planned for the exploration purposes, including who the learners are, their characteristics, what kind of learning limitation, etc.
- (2) Design, The specific phase is assigned to focus on learning goal, assessment tools, pieces of training, designs' content, subject analysis, lesson plan, and selection of media and activities. The design part would be organized and precise.
- (3) The improvement section, the instructional designers, and inverters would generate and bring together the content resources, blueprint in the former designing phase.(4) Implementation, the implemetation stage improves the procedures for the training – organizer as well as learners. (5) Evaluation, the evaluation phase involves the two features of summative assessment and formative evaluation.¹²

C. Conceptual Framework

Based on the explanation of several design models previously, the researcher determines the model which strongly supports the materials developed in this research is ADDIE Model. It will be described in the following conceptual framework:

¹² Aldoobie, Nada. (2015). ADDIE Model. 5(6), 68-71.

1. Analysis

In this phase, the researcher should know students' lack, want, and necessity. To know them, those three components contain in the questionnaire that the researcher gave. In addition, the questionnaire also aimed to know about students' competence, students' learning capability, student' previous knowledge.

2. Design

In this phase, the researcher will design the syllabus as to what would be developed for students of Arabic education. What skills are needed, how the language is used and how students can know English through the language used, how to arrange material systematically based on needs analysis.

3. Development

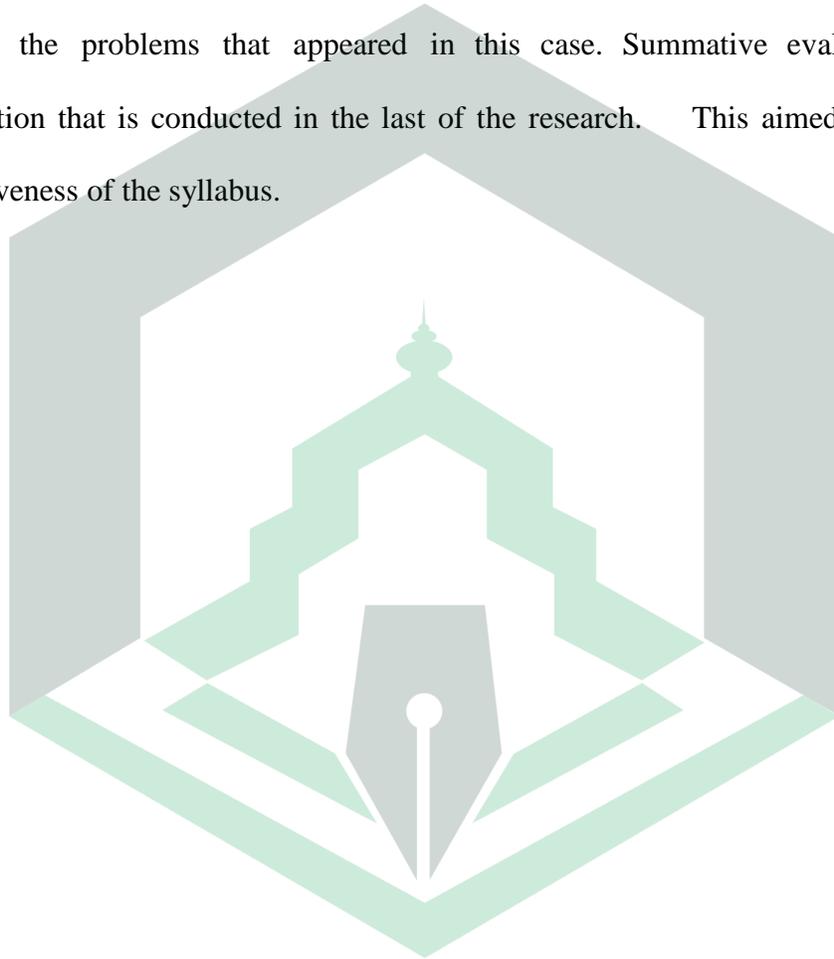

In this phase, the researcher will focus on developing the material. Development here consists of: ((1) Collecting material. (2)Arranging the design by using TBLT (Teaching Based on Language Teaching) approach. It is the design of exercise should be from the lowest to the highest level. Here the design can be typing, illustration, and lay-out. (3) Validating. The validation uses two ways, first way will use expert's judgment and second way will use the student's perception.

4. Implementation

In this phase, the syllabus had been validated by experts. The implementation was in the small number of students. This way aimed to know the effectiveness and interest of the test book.

5. Evaluation

In this phase, the researcher will use two evaluations. They are formative evaluation and summative evaluation. Formative evaluation is conducted for collecting the data in each step of doing this research. This aimed to have vital data to fix the problems that appeared in this case. Summative evaluation is an evaluation that is conducted in the last of the research. This aimed to know the effectiveness of the syllabus.

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHOD

A. Research Design

This research is categorized as research and development (R&D). According to Sugiyono (2015: 407), the research and development method (R&D) is used to produce a products and know the product's effectiveness. In creating the product, the writer firstly analyzes needs, designs products, and tests its effectiveness by using expert's judgment and student's perception. The product that will be produced in this research is ESP Syllabus for the Arabic education study program. The design of this research used an ADDIE development model. It is because the ADDIE model is easy to understand, simple, and also systematic. The ADDIE model consists of 5 steps, namely: (1) Analysis, (2)Design, (3) Development, (4) Implementation, and (5) Evaluation. (ADDIE: 1990 by Raiser & Mollenda).¹³

B. Location and Time of The Research

This research was conducted at the Institute for Islamic Studies Palopo, South Sulawesi, especially for Arabic Education Study Program students. It was shown from August 2019- January 2021.

¹³ Hanafi.(2017) “ Konsep penelitian R and D dalam bidang pendidikan.” 4(2), 129-150.

C. Subject and Object of The Research

This research population was the third semester of the Arabic study program, Tarbiyah and Teacher Training Faculty, English department. The sample of this research was 20 students from each class (A class and B class).

D. Design of the Material Try-out

1. Design of Try-out

The try-out would conduct once after the researcher designed an ESP syllabus. In the try-out, the researcher used student's perceptions.

2. Subject of try out

The subject of trying out in this research was the second-semester students of the Arabic education study program at IAIN Palopo.

E. Technique and Data Collection Instrument

In this research, three instruments would be used to collect the data.

They are :

1. Interview

The researcher has done some interviews with the learners and the English lecture. Interviews were used to collect information about teaching and learning English in the Arabic education study program.

2. Questionnaire

The questionnaire's goal was to know the learners' attitudes toward English material that would be developed. In this research, the data collecting from three questioners. The First was questioner for needs analysis, the second was questioner for expert's judgments, and the last was questioner for students' perceptions. The questioner will be given by using random sampling from the student of the Arabic education study program.

3. Documentation

This research's documentation can be pictures, videos, recordings, or files of the interviews, questionnaires, and the list of learners' names.

F. Data Analysis Techniques

In this research, the data will be collected by using three questionnaires. The first questionnaire for needs analysis, the second was a questionnaire in expert judgment, and the last was the questionnaire in try-out (Students' perception).

1. Data Analysis in the questionnaire.

The data analysis used from this part was descriptive, which will be analyzed by calculating the percentage of the answer. The result of the need analysis from the questionnaire would use this pattern:

$$X = \frac{\sum X}{N} \times 100\%$$

X = the mean

$\sum x$ = number of students who have the same answer

N = the total number of the students

The opinion with the higher percentage would be the most accepted choice choice by the students. The following table shows the analysis result.

| No | Question | Respond | Frequency (N) | Percentage (%) |
|----|----------|---------|---------------|----------------|
| | | | | |

2. Data Analysis in expert judgment and Students' perception

This analysis will use Likert-Scala as the measurement. The results of the questionnaires are going to use a pattern below:

$$R = \frac{X_h - X_l}{5}$$

where:

R = Range

X_h = The highest score

X_l = The lowest score

5 = The range of Likert-scale

Then, the result of the data will be written by using descriptive. The indicator of measuring the product is the mean (X). The Means will be used conversion pattern data:

$$Mn (X) = \frac{\sum fx}{n}$$

Table 3.2 Data conversion table

| Scales | Interval | Descriptive Categories |
|---------------|--------------------|-------------------------------|
| 1 | $1.0 < X \leq 1.7$ | Very Poor |
| 2 | $1.8 < X \leq 2.5$ | Poor |
| 3 | $2.6 < X \leq 3.3$ | Fair |
| 4 | $3.4 < X \leq 4.1$ | Good |
| 5 | $4.2 < X \leq 5.0$ | Very Good |

The material in need analysis questionnaire was divided into four skills, and each gift has four options. In each option, who got the high percentage would have more time than the other option. The material in the syllabus was designed from the lowest level to the high level.

2. The Result of Expert Judgement

a. Expert Judgement on Instrument

In this expert judgment on the instrument, the researcher validated the instrument by giving a questionnaire to material and language experts that contain questions about the instrument. There are 12 questions in the questionnaire asking all about all aspects of the instrument. The experts are MUSTAFA, M.Pd.I, as a secretary of Arabic at IAIN Palopo and NURHAJAR P, S.Pd. M.Pd as English lecturer of Arabic at IAIN Palopo. The result of expert judgment on the instrument can show as follow:

1) Material Expert

Based on an expert judgment by overall material, the student's syllabus got a total score of 53 with an average of 4.41, which included a "Very Good" category.

b. Expert's Judgement on Syllabus

In this expert validation on the syllabus, the researcher validated the syllabus by giving a questionnaire to language, material, and layout experts that contains questions about the product. There are 27 questions in the questionnaire asking about all aspects of the development. The experts are Dr. MASRUDDIN, M.Hum as a lecture in IAIN Palopo, MUSTAFA, M.Pd.I am a secretary of Arabic at IAIN Palopo and NURHAJAR P, S.Pd. M.Pd as English lecturer of Arabic at IAIN Palopo.

3. Trying out

In this research, the trying out was conducted using student's perception questionnaire and shared using google form. There are ten questions in the questionnaire asking about the product. There are 20 students as a sample, ten students from each class (A class and B class). The student's perception was conducted to make sure that the material is genuinely appropriate to apply to Arabic students. The result of students' perception can show as follow:

Table 4.7. Result of student's perception of the designed syllabus for Arabic

| No | Statement | Means | Description of Agreement |
|----|--|-------|--------------------------|
| 1 | The material on syllabus based on the lower basic level | 4.2 | Strongly Agree |
| 2 | The material on syllabus based on student's need in Arabic majority | 4.25 | Strongly Agree |

The data above shows that the researcher's syllabus is already qualified to apply in the class. It is proved from the score of the student's perception, which answered Strongly Agree 5.25 and Agree 3.95. Then, the average mean is 4.6. In the interval, this category got "Very Good."

4. The revision from expert's correction on syllabus

The correction from all the experts was about there were a lot of missing word on syllabus and and check the syllabus using grammarly and it has been revised. The syllabus got the high percentage which the syllabus got 4.15 from the language experts, 4.11 from the material expert, and 4.8 from lay-out expert. it is means "very good".

B. Discussion

This research aims to design an ESP syllabus for Arabic education students and an Esp syllabus developed using the ADDIE model. It consists of five steps. The researcher does the first step was analysis by conducting need analysis presented in the form of a questioner validated by the experts. The questioner contains target needs and learning needs. Need analysis was done in October 2020. There were 40 students as a sample of this research which 20 students of each class (A class and B class) of the third semester Arabic education study program in the academic year 2019/2020.

The next stage is designing the product. According to Nation and Macalister (2010: 24-25), the learners need to analyze the target situation. The researcher used need analysis results to design material, activity, and Setting of the syllabus.

The next stage is developing the product. In this step, the researcher created the syllabus through several measurements such as English proficiency level, exciting topic, student's target, activity, and setting. The student's syllabus consists of several activities or methods in each meeting and consists of 14 meetings, including the middle semester in the eighth meeting and the final semester in the last meeting. All the aspect above is based on the needs analysis questionnaire, wherein proficiency level the high percentage is the basic level. Developing exciting topics based on a high rate of need analysis questionnaire. It is also based on the high percentage of need analysis questioner and compatibility with the topic about activity and setting.

After constructing the student's syllabus, the next stage was conducting product validation. Three experts validated the product consist of a language expert, material expert, and design expert. The purpose of doing validation is to know the quality of student's syllabus based on the aspect of validity. The expert's validation questioner is composed of four aspects, namely: (1) the precision of the content, (2) the accuracy of the language, (3) the accuracy of material input, and (4) the precision of the design of syllabus. It is suitable for Kane's (2006) argument based on the approach to validation research. Construct a significant validation claim: score can be trusted, and the score is generalizable to a universe of items or tasks. From these three expert validations, there is a correction.

The last stage is the implementation and evaluation of the product. In this step, the revised student's syllabus based on the expert's assessment was tested using the student's perception. There were 20 students doing student's perception, and it is consist of 10 students for each class (A class and B class)—the students perception using google form.

The Arabic Education study program's syllabus design causes an absence of basic learning material, and there was no specific material for Arabic students. As a result, the students communicating by using English. .It is known From the observation that has been done by the researcher before in the Arabic education study program. Eventually, the researcher designed the ESP syllabus, and it is an integrated skill. According to (Brown 2001:233), integrated skill is a perspective that views the four skills as a unit and not separate.

This research was related to two previous studies: Wieka Barhatayomi & Dina Rachmawati. Their journal concluded English for Specific Purposes was suitable for Editing Course. Luqman Hakim, in his Thesis, ended English for Specific Purposes for Stikes Students at Al-Irsyad Cilacap was English material, especially speaking and listening.

As for the similarities of two previous studies with this research, both used English for Specific Purposes in designing a syllabus. But in each thesis has a difference, namely, method and material used to teach. Especially this research concluded integrated skill, and this research was done in the pandemic era.

This syllabus can be used in Arabic cause the syllabus is suitable for the student's problem in learning English in the Arabic education study program at IAIN Palopo. We know English is very important in this era. The limitation of this research are: the student's syllabus only for the second semester of the Arabic education study program and almost the questioner using a google form, except expert validation.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS
